The newly approved University of California San Diego Master of Public Health (MPH) program will commence training its first cohort of students in Fall 2018. It is designed to be a contemporary, academically rigorous 2-year program with both thesis and experimental capstone options. The MPH program will provide instruction in the core public health disciplines of Biostatistics, Epidemiology, Environmental Health Sciences, Health Policy and Management, and Social and Behavioral Sciences. Further, it will address key aspects of 21st century public health, by leveraging existing strengths of Department of Family Medicine and Public Health (FMPH) and UC San Diego colleagues in climate change, data science and mental health. MPH students will benefit not only from high quality academic training, but also from opportunities to engage in innovative public health research and public health practice in community settings.

For more information please contact Rosemarie Subala at rsubala@ucsd.edu (858)534-0699, or Josh Miller at j3miller@ucsd.edu (858)534-9102 & visit our website at publichealth.ucsd.edu